General Scott.

A telegraphic despatch to the northward on Monday night, and published in Tuesday morning's papers, stated that General Scott was to depart that morning for a few days, and that his place of resort was unknown. The truth is that General Scott had no such notion. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, he has been constant in his attention to business of his office, civil, cheerful, and quiet, and no man not acquainted with the facts could believe it possible that he had any more interest in the great events passing in the country than the plainest citizen in our midst. By sunrise each morning, he has been seen upon Pennsylvania avenue, taking his accustomed walk, and exchanging salutations with the friends whom he encounters.

On the night of his nomination he paid a handsome compliment to Gen. Pierce in the speech he addressed from his piazza to the multitude before him; and when Gen. Pierce comes to our city he will undoubtedly receive from the old hero a greeting in the same spirit. During his administration, also, should any emergency arise calling for his counsels, we predict the existence of a most friendly and agreeable intimacy between Gen. Scott and President Pierce. The feelings that operated on the Polk administration toward him will not find a place in the next; and he mated entire product of the mines from that time who shall hereafter malign the name of Scott, will find an echo in the bosoms of but few who own the name of Americans!

The Election of 1852.

From all quarters we hear reports of the calm. peaceful, and decorous demeanor of the citizens of this republic, on the day of its national elections. The remarks made by the Philadelphia Bulletin are applicable to almost every city and town in the Union. "Had an intelligent foreigner." says that paper, "been in our city yesterday, he would scarcely have believed that it was the day of our great national election. Accustomed to hearing at home that the people are incapable of self-government, he could not have realized that this vast nation was actually choosing its chief executive officer, for the ensuing four years. The quiet with which everything was conducted would have increased his wonder. Remembering the ceremonies with which new monarchs are inaugurated in Europe, and old empires revived. he would have been astonished, almost beyond measure, by the republican 'simplicity of our proceedings. Many such foreigners, visiting the United States on a tour of travel, we have no doubt, were in Philadelphia yesterday. Their reflections on the day were salutary, without question; and must have induced serious thought. The calmness with which the defeated party endures its disaster, to-day, will naturally assist the favorable impression which our institutions have left on the minds of such visitors. Alas! that all nations are not, like this, capable of self-government, and in the enjoyment of free suffrage. But the auspicious time, when republicanism shall prevail in all civilized communities, draws nearer and downtrodden Hungary, the heart of humanity has no cause for permanent despair."

The American People.

It appears, says the New York Tribune, that out of 3,097,858 souls in New York, 2,439,296 were born in the United States; 84,820 in England; 348,111 in Ireland; 31,000 in Scotland and Wales; 118,398 in Germany; 47,200 in Britabout two-ninths of the whole people.

This prohibition only served to excite curiosity, and they very uncivilly proceeded to disobey the hospitable owner's injunction. On opening the door, a forcible jet of water was squirted full in their faces—a very just, though not very severe retribution.

Goodall's fifth concert came off last night before a very fine audience in "Iren Hall," and gave entire satisfaction. We do really believe that Master Goodall is hardly excelled as a violinist by the great masters we have heard and applauded. He performs the same pieces, and the ear must be nice indeed that can detect a single error while he cuts no monkey-shines to induce his hearers to believe that certain passages are more difficult than they really are. All his work is done without the addition of extras not named in the programme. He is to give a series of concerts in the Southern cities. May good luck at-

DAILY COMMENTARY: A Practical Exposition of Select Portions of Scripture for every Morning and Evening throughout the Year. Being a Companion to Family Worship. By One Hundred and Righty Clergymen of Scotland. 800.

"Scotland abounds with learned and pious ministers— "Scotland abounds with learned and pipus ministers—men of sterling plety and fervent zeal in the enuse of God.
The commentaries which we have read are decidedly practical in their nature, and do not seem to have been written in sight of any party creed or confession of fatth. As an aid to family devotion we can safely recommend it, and hope it will be extensively used for this purpose, as it supplies a want which has been long felt in the churches."—Christian
